A Guide to Collateral Consequences of Juvenile Court Involvement

Your juvenile record doesn’t disappear when you turn 18.

Report design by Tanya Pereira
As you begin to move forward with your life after being involved in the juvenile court system, this guide provides information about what obstacles lay ahead and how to prepare yourself for them.

The court and police paperwork about your case are called your “juvenile record.” This record can affect your life for years to come. But you can still pursue your goals and build a bright future by understanding the challenges caused by a juvenile record and knowing what to do and where to get help.

The road forward might be met with challenges – but we hope this guide will show you that progress can be made and there is a community of advocates in Maryland who are here to help you succeed.

“A journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step.” – Lao Tzu
Glossary

Adjudication: An adjudication is when you go to court and the juvenile court judge decides you broke the law. It is not a conviction.¹

Collateral Consequences: Collateral consequences are the ways that your juvenile record can create challenges for you as you move forward with your life, like getting a job, applying for college, finding a place to live, joining the military, or simply obtaining a driver’s license.

Defense Lawyer: Your defense lawyer is the lawyer who defended you in your juvenile case, who may have been from the public defender’s office or appointed by the judge. This person’s job is to be sure the court hears your perspective in your juvenile case. Your lawyer may also be able to help you after your case is over.

Delinquent Act: If you are under 18 and you’re accused of breaking the law, you are accused of a delinquent act, not a crime — as long as your case is in juvenile court.

Disposition: A disposition in juvenile court is similar to a sentence in adult court. The disposition in your case is what the judge requires you to do because the judge decided that you broke the law. Your disposition could include probation, attending a treatment program, paying money, or being sent to a juvenile facility.

Expungement: If your juvenile record is expunged, it means that the records will be either destroyed or put in a different location from all other juvenile records, and removed from any computer databases.²

Juvenile Record: Your juvenile record includes the court and police paperwork related to your juvenile case.

Sealing: If your juvenile record is sealed, it means that the records will be closed and no one can look at them without a special court order.³
Making the Most of This Guide

Having a juvenile record can get in the way of future opportunities. The barriers created by your juvenile record are called “collateral consequences.” This guide provides basic information about the collateral consequences of a juvenile record in Maryland and what you can do to overcome them.

Every young person's situation is different. Depending on the offense you faced in court, you may have a suspended driver's license or trouble enrolling back into school. The Summary Chart on page 6 tells you which collateral consequences are addressed in this guide, and where in the guide to look for more details. You can read the entire guide or jump to the sections that matter most to you.

Following the discussion on collateral consequences, you will find a Resources section. There are many organizations in Maryland that are available to help you address the problems you are facing. The Resources section includes contact information for your local public defender office and organizations that can assist you with education, housing, immigration, and other collateral consequences.

This guide only talks about the consequences of juvenile court involvement — not adult criminal court involvement. Sometimes when youth are charged with serious crimes, they are charged as an adult even though they are under 18 years old. Here, we will only focus on juvenile records.

Because the law is always changing, some of the information in this guide might become outdated. Also, this guide does not discuss every collateral consequence or every detail of each consequence. You can contact the lawyer who represented you in juvenile court or someone at your local public defender office to make sure you have the most current information you need.

This guide is only intended to provide information, not legal advice.
How Should I Talk About My Juvenile Record?

It's important to pay attention to the specific words used when someone asks you a question in an interview or when you’re filling out an application. If you are asked if you have a conviction or if you have ever been convicted of a crime, you can answer “No,” as long as you do not have any adult court convictions. A juvenile adjudication is not a conviction in Maryland.

Maryland juvenile records are confidential, so it is rare that you will need to tell people about your juvenile record. But, if you do, be careful and follow these tips:

- Talk with the lawyer who represented you in your juvenile case or a lawyer from your local public defender office about your juvenile record and how you should answer questions. A lawyer can provide you with specific advice.
- Make sure the interviewer knows that under Maryland law a juvenile adjudication is not the same as a criminal conviction.
- Be brief and don’t give too many details.
  - For example, “I have a juvenile adjudication for a misdemeanor from 2015.”
  - If you are asked for more information about your specific adjudication, a lawyer can help you figure out what exactly you should say.

A juvenile adjudication is not a conviction.
• Avoid blaming others. It seems as if we do not take responsibility for our own actions when we blame others. If we do not take responsibility, then others may think we have not learned from our past mistakes.

• Talk about how you have learned from your past. “I made a youthful mistake, but I’ve changed. I’m more mature now, and I have stayed out of trouble since.”

• Focus on the positive things you are doing in your life.
  - I have good grades.
  - I graduated from high school (or completed my GED).
  - I’m attending college.
  - I volunteer with_____________________.
  - I have a job at_____________________.
  - I help take care of my younger siblings.
  - I help with household responsibilities, like chores and running errands for my parents.

• Practice! Sometimes it is hard to talk about your juvenile court involvement. Practice with a lawyer, friend, or mentor to make sure you feel comfortable.

• Ask for a letter from a mentor, teacher, or other trusted leader that talks about your skills and strengths. The letter can help show the employer or school that you work hard, show up on time, follow the rules, have a positive attitude, and are able to do the job or complete the school program.

Collateral Consequences in Maryland

Note to the reader: This section includes endnotes (small numbers at the end of a sentence or phrase that correspond to additional information at the end of the guide). The endnotes often tell you what laws or rules apply to the sentence containing the endnote number.

1. Who can look at my juvenile record?

Court and police records about your juvenile case are confidential. This means that juvenile records are not available to the public. People can’t find information about your juvenile record the same way they can easily find information about an adult record. But, there are some people who can see your record, like the police, prosecutors, Department of Juvenile Services (DJS) case managers, judges, and juvenile court employees. Your lawyer and other juvenile defense lawyers can also look at your record. The judge can share your juvenile record with someone else, but only if the judge decides there is a good reason to share it with that person.

Sometimes your juvenile record can be shared with your school even if you were only arrested; for example, if you are suspected of being in a gang. Your school is supposed to destroy this information when you turn 22 or when you graduate from high school. Go to Question 5 for more information on how your juvenile record might affect your ability to attend your local school.

Your record could also be shared with the Motor Vehicle Administration (MVA) if you were adjudicated delinquent of certain offenses. The MVA is not allowed to share your juvenile record with car insurance companies or any person other than you, your parent, your lawyer, the judge, the prosecutor, or the police. Go to Question 15 for more information about how your juvenile record might impact your driver’s license.
2. Can my juvenile record be used against me in later juvenile or adult criminal cases?

Maybe. If you’re charged with another juvenile offense, the judge can look at your juvenile record when deciding if you have to stay in detention until your trial or if you can go home. The judge could also look at your record if deciding whether to waive your case to adult court or when deciding about a disposition in that case.

If you are charged with a crime as an adult, the criminal court judge can use your juvenile record to decide whether you get bail (a money payment that allows you to go home before your trial) if your juvenile adjudication happened in the previous three years. And, if you’re under 23 and convicted of committing a crime as an adult, the adult court judge can look at your juvenile record for sentencing.

Except in these specific situations, your juvenile record can’t be used against you in court.

3. How can I keep people from looking at my juvenile record?

You may be able to get your juvenile court record sealed, which means that very few people (not even prosecutors) will be allowed to look at your record without a special court order. Only the court records are sealed — not the police arrest records. But police records are confidential and not available to the public.

There are two ways to get your juvenile record sealed:

1. If you’re 21 or older, you can file a request with the juvenile court where your case was heard. The law requires the judge to grant your request to seal your record if you’re 21 or older. That’s it — you don’t have to prove anything else.

2. If you’re under 21, you can ask the juvenile court to seal your record, but you have to show the judge that you have a good reason. A good reason could be that you are applying to college or for a job, and sealing your juvenile record may keep you from having to report it on applications. Another good reason is that you don’t want your juvenile record to make it harder for you to get an occupational license. You can also tell the judge that you completed everything you were supposed to do for your juvenile case, and you would like to keep your record from blocking opportunities in the future.

After your juvenile record is sealed, it can later be “unsealed” if a person convinces the judge that they have a good reason to look at it. The court should notify you if someone asks to unseal your record. When a juvenile record is unsealed, it will still be confidential — meaning it is not available to the public.

For help with sealing your juvenile record, contact the lawyer who represented you in juvenile court or go to the Resources section at the end of this guide where you will find contact information for the Maryland Office of the Public Defender in your county.
4. Can I get my juvenile record expunged?

Court and police records may be eligible for expungement, which means that the records will be either destroyed or set aside from all other records and removed from any computer databases. Once your record is expunged, you do not need to tell an employer or college, technical, or trade school about your record in interviews or on applications. Also, you do not need to talk about your expunged record on Maryland state applications for a license, permit, registration, or state employment.

To have your juvenile record expunged, all of the following must be true:

- You are age 18 or older;
- At least two years have passed since anything happened in your case;
- You have not been adjudicated or found guilty of any other offense;
- You do not have any open juvenile or adult cases;
- You were not required to register as a sex offender;
- You have fully paid any restitution — or, money the judge orders you to pay back for damage caused or property taken; and,
- Your juvenile adjudication was not a felony, a “crime of violence,” a fourth degree sex offense, or a “crime of violence” involving the use of a gun.

If all of the above are true, you can submit a request to the court to expunge your record. But it is still up to the judge whether to grant your request. You should talk to a lawyer to make sure you are eligible and to help prepare you to make the best arguments as to why the judge should expunge your record.

If you were charged as an adult but your case was sent down (transferred) to juvenile court, the adult charge may still show up on a criminal background check. However, you can get the charge expunged by filing a request with the adult criminal court. The judge is required to grant your request and expunge the charge. Once expunged, the adult charge should no longer show up on a criminal background check.

You may have to pay a $30 fee to file your request to expunge your record with the court. You do not need to pay the filing fee if you won your case at trial (like a “not guilty” finding). If you cannot afford to pay the fee, you can ask the court to waive (not make you pay) the filing fee by completing the Request for Waiver of Pre-paid Costs Form: www.mdcourts.gov/courtforms/joint/ccdc089.pdf.

You should always keep a copy of the expungement order in case you need it in the future.

For help with expunging your juvenile record, contact the lawyer who represented you in juvenile court or go to the Resources section at the end of this guide where you will find contact information for the Maryland Office of the Public Defender in your county. You can also find more information about sealing or expunging your juvenile record on the Clean Slate Clearinghouse website: www.cleanslateclearinghouse.org/states/maryland/juvenile-record-overview/.

5. Will my juvenile record affect my ability to go to my local public school?

Maybe. Police are required to tell your school if you were arrested for certain charges like assault, robbery, or carjacking. Your school can use this information to change your classes, limit the school-related activities you can attend, or suspend or expel you from school.

If you were arrested for a sex offense (even if the judge did not find that you broke the law), your school is allowed to stop you from attending school or riding the bus if the person who accused you attends your school or rides your bus. Go to Question 14 in this section for more information on how a sex offense adjudication can affect your life.

You can challenge your school’s decision to suspend or expel you. A lawyer can help you challenge the school’s decision and understand the process. For suspensions that are 10 school days or less, each school district has different rules. However, you can meet with the school principal or other administrators and explain your side. For expulsions or suspensions longer than 10 school days, you and a lawyer can meet with officials from the Office of the Superintendent for your school district. If the superintendent decides you should be suspended or expelled, you can ask a higher official to take another look at your case.
Talk to a lawyer or other knowledgeable adult about what to say in a school meeting because what you say can be used against you in a juvenile or criminal court case.”

Talk to a lawyer or other knowledgeable adult about what to say in a school meeting because what you say can be used against you in a juvenile or criminal court case.

For help, go to the Resources section at the end of this guide, which includes resources created by Disability Rights Maryland and the Maryland Office of the Public Defender, as well as contact information for both organizations.

You can be accepted into college even with a juvenile record. Don’t let your juvenile record keep you from applying!

6. Can I get accepted into a college, technical, or trade school if I have a juvenile record?

Yes. Pay close attention to how the college application asks about your record. If the application asks if you have been convicted, you can answer “No,” if you only have a juvenile record and no adult record. If the application asks about adjudications, you may need to include information about your juvenile record. Go to page 4 for tips on how to talk about your juvenile record.
The Common Application (Common App) for college, which is used by more than 600 colleges and universities, asks:

Have you ever been adjudicated guilty or convicted of a misdemeanor or felony? Note that you are not required to answer “yes” to this question, or provide an explanation, if the criminal adjudication or conviction has been expunged, sealed, annulled, pardoned, destroyed, erased, impounded, or otherwise required by law or ordered by a court to be kept confidential.

The guidelines for the Common App say that being “adjudicated guilty” is the same thing as being adjudicated delinquent. Because Maryland juvenile records are confidential, you can answer “No” to this question if you only have a juvenile record in Maryland, you don’t have an adult record, and you don’t have a juvenile record in another state.

The Common App also asks about school discipline violations. You are required to report your school discipline violations on the Common App even if they are related to your confidential or sealed juvenile record.

You can be accepted into college even with a juvenile record. Don’t let your juvenile record keep you from applying!

7. Can I get a student loan to help pay for college, technical, or trade school?

Yes. To apply for a federal student loan to help pay for college, you must complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). The FAFSA asks whether you have been convicted of a drug charge while receiving federal student loans. If you only have juvenile adjudications, you can answer “No” to this question — even if your juvenile record includes a drug-related offense — because this question is asking about adult convictions, not juvenile adjudications. And if you have never received federal student aid before, you can also answer “No” because the question is asking if you were convicted while receiving federal financial aid.
8. Can I get a job if I have a juvenile record?

Yes. Employers should not be able to find out information about your juvenile record because the records are confidential. Most employers don’t ask about juvenile records. If an application asks whether you’ve been convicted of a crime, you can answer “No” as long as you only have a juvenile record.

Just like you need a driver’s license to legally drive a car, some jobs require you to have an occupational license in order to do certain work. For example, barbers, electricians, and nurses must have occupational licenses. The application for an occupational license might ask about your juvenile record.

Please remember to read the questions on the application carefully so that you answer only what is asked. Go to page 4 for tips on how to talk about your juvenile record.

9. Can I join the military if I have a juvenile record?

Your juvenile record might make it harder for you to join the military. Generally, the United States military does not treat juvenile records differently than adult records. If your record involves selling drugs, sex offenses, domestic violence, or a felony, you may need to request special permission (a waiver) to enlist. Each branch of the military has different rules about waivers. For more information, visit www.usa.gov/join-military or contact a recruiter.

You may need to give the military a copy of your juvenile court paperwork, even if your record has been expunged or sealed. Before you request to have your juvenile record sealed or expunged, make sure to get a copy of your complete court record because the court will not have copies of expunged records and cannot give you sealed records without a court order. Go to Question 3 for information about sealing and Question 4 for information about expunging your juvenile record.
If an application asks whether you’ve been convicted of a crime, you can answer “No” as long as you only have a juvenile record."
10. Will my juvenile record affect my immigration status?

Talk to an immigration lawyer to find out whether your juvenile record affects your ability to stay in the United States or become a legal resident. If you’re adjudicated for certain types of offenses, it will be more difficult to get legal immigration status.38

To help your lawyer figure out possible ways that you can get immigration status, tell your lawyer if you:

● Have been abused, neglected, or abandoned by a parent;
● Have been a victim of human trafficking or sex trafficking, or the victim of any crime; or,
● Are undocumented or have a green card or other type of legal status, such as a U visa.

Remember: Everything you tell your lawyer is confidential. This means your lawyer can’t share anything you tell them with anyone else.

If you’re undocumented or don’t have legal status, even just being arrested can cause problems. If you’re taken into custody or arrested by the police, Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) may try to pick you up when you are released from the local jail or detention facility.

If anyone from the FBI or ICE asks you questions, especially about your immigration status or where you were born, you do not have to answer their questions without a lawyer.

For help with immigration issues, go to the Resources section at the end of this guide for contact information for Kids in Need of Defense (KIND), Catholic Charities Immigration Legal Services, and University of Maryland Immigration Clinic. You can also find more information in the Immigrant Legal Resource Center’s Guide for Immigrant Youth: www.ilrc.org/sites/default/files/documents/youth_handbook-2015-06_05-en.pdf.39
If anyone from the FBI or ICE asks you questions, especially about your immigration status or where you were born, you do not have to answer their questions without a lawyer.”
11. Can I get public benefits (like SNAP, Medicaid, and SSI) with a juvenile record? What happens to my benefits if I’m locked up?

You should be able to get most public benefits with a juvenile record. If the application asks about convictions and you only have a juvenile record and no adult convictions, you can answer “No.”

Getting locked up in a juvenile facility might affect things like food stamps (Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program or SNAP), Medicaid, Supplemental Security Income (SSI), and Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF). Your parents may not be able to receive SSI checks for you, and your family’s SNAP and TANF assistance could be reduced while you are locked up in a juvenile facility. If you have health insurance through Medicaid and you are sent to a juvenile facility, ask your DJS case manager or your lawyer to make sure you get re-enrolled when you are released.

For help with public benefits, go to the Resources section at the end of this guide for contact information for the Maryland Legal Aid office in your area.

12. Can I live in public housing or get a housing voucher if I have a juvenile record?

You and your family may not be allowed to live in public housing if you are involved with certain criminal activities — especially drugs or violence — even if you don’t go to court. In some situations, you may not be allowed to live in public housing at all; for example, if you have to register as a sex offender for life or if you are convicted of making meth while on public housing property.

While criminal background checks do not generally reveal juvenile records, there is no law that stops the housing authorities from asking whether you were ever arrested, put on probation, or adjudicated in juvenile court — all of which may be related to your juvenile record. For example, Baltimore City asks about certain convictions, sex offender registration, probation, and home monitoring; Anne Arundel County requires all adults in public housing to pass a criminal background check; and Carroll County asks about arrests and convictions for drug-related charges.

It is important to remember that juvenile adjudications are not convictions and you do not need to mention your juvenile record when asked about convictions. However, if the question asks about arrests, you may need to answer “Yes.” Go to page 4 for tips on how to talk about your juvenile record.

For help with housing issues, go to the Resources section at the end of this guide for contact information for the Maryland Legal Aid office in your area.
13. What happens if I don’t pay the court fees or restitution?

The juvenile court judge may require you to pay court fees or restitution (an order to pay someone back for damage caused or property taken). If you don’t pay court ordered fees or restitution, money can be taken out of your paycheck or tax return. And since Maryland charges interest on court fees and restitution, the amount you owe will go up the longer you don’t pay. Unpaid fees or restitution can also show up on your credit report. A credit report is like a school report card that shows how good or bad you’ve been about paying your bills. Having a bad credit report can make it harder for you to rent an apartment, get a school loan, buy a house or car, or get a credit card. It can also show up if you apply for a job where the employer asks for a credit check or background check, like many government jobs.

14. Do I have to register as a sex offender if I have a sex offense on my juvenile record?

The juvenile court judge may require you to register as a sex offender, which means that your name and address are added to a list (the juvenile sex offender registry) that only the police can see. The juvenile sex offender registry is not available online for the public to search. If you are on the juvenile registry, you will most likely have to check in with DJS every three months to update your information. When you turn 21, your name is automatically removed from the juvenile registry. You can also ask the judge to remove your name before you turn 21. It’s rare, but there is a chance you can be added to the public sex offender registry for adults, even for something that happened when you were under 18. You can only be added to the public sex offender registry after you turn 18 if the prosecutor or DJS case manager successfully argues to the judge that you are a “risk” to the community. If the prosecutor or case manager tries to add you to the adult public sex offender registry, immediately contact the Maryland Office of the Public Defender, which is listed in the Resources section at the end of the guide.

If you have a sex offense on your record and you want to move or stay more than a few nights in another state (including DC), contact a lawyer first to make sure your plans will not negatively affect you.

15. Can I get or keep my driver’s license or state ID if I have a juvenile record?

Certain charges can lead to an automatic suspension of your driver’s license for six months to two years. These include drunk driving, driving a recreational vehicle on the highway, failing to stop your car when the police tell you to stop, or hit and run.

There are also a few non-driving offenses for which the judge can suspend your license, like lying about your age to buy alcohol. The judge can suspend your license for anywhere from 30 days to until your 21st birthday.

“ If you have a sex offense on your record and you want to move or stay more than a few nights in another state (including DC), contact a lawyer first to make sure your plans will not negatively affect you.”
Your license can be suspended even if you do not yet have a license. If you’re under 16 years old, the suspension will start on your 16th birthday. And if your provisional driver’s license is suspended, you will have to start at the beginning of the 18-month provisional license period once the suspension is over.

Your juvenile record will not impact your ability to get or keep your state ID. If you were placed in a juvenile facility, your DJS case manager should have a copy of your birth certificate and Social Security card. When you’re released, ask your case manager to take you to the MVA to get an ID. An ID is required for employment, housing, medical assistance, and many other important opportunities and resources.
If your license is suspended, you may be allowed to get a permit to drive to work, school, or an alcohol education or treatment program. To get your suspension lifted, you will have to ask for a hearing with the MVA.

For more information, go to the Resources section for a resource from the MVA and contact information for the Maryland Office of the Public Defender in your county. You can also contact the lawyer who represented you in juvenile court.

16. Can I vote if I only have a juvenile record?

Yes. Your juvenile record will not impact your right to vote.

17. Can I serve on a jury if I only have a juvenile record?

Yes. Your juvenile record will not impact your ability to serve on a jury.

18. Can I own or carry a gun if I have a juvenile record?

The law on carrying and owning guns is complicated, so if you’re thinking of purchasing a gun, make sure you do more research. For instance, if you have a juvenile record for a “violent” charge, such as robbery, carjacking, or first or second degree assault, then you are not allowed to possess a gun until you are 30 years old. If you need a permit to own or carry a gun for a job, you can contact the Maryland Office of the Public Defender for help. Their contact information is included in the Resources section of this guide.

NATIONAL JUVENILE DEFENDER CENTER

The National Juvenile Defender Center (NJDC) is a nonprofit, nonpartisan organization dedicated to promoting justice for all children by ensuring excellence in juvenile defense. Through community building, training, and policy reform, we provide national leadership on juvenile defense issues with a focus on curbing the deprivation of young people's rights in the court system. Our reach extends to urban, suburban, rural, and tribal areas, where we elevate the voices of youth, families, and defenders to create positive case outcomes and meaningful opportunities for children. We also work with broad coalitions to ensure that the reform of juvenile courts includes the protection of children's rights — particularly the right to counsel. To learn more about NJDC, please visit www.njdc.info.

This brochure was created by the National Juvenile Defender Center in collaboration with the Maryland Office of the Public Defender. The project is supported by Grant # 2015-MU-BX-K002 that was awarded by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, Office of Justice Programs, U.S. Department of Justice. The opinions, findings, and conclusions or recommendations expressed in this guide are those of the author(s) and do not necessarily reflect those of the Department of Justice.
